

A Love Gift for a Love Walk ...

It was my 12th birthday ... two years after called to world ministry.

I eagerly awoke putting on my favorite pink dress for celebration. No one had noticed the little pink dress and the excited child. I waited for that forthcoming surprise party. All the possible times for a child's party came and went.

That night my mother took me to my room that had a little altar. She allowed me to pray then tucked me in and turned off the light as usual. Only thing different that night was that I asked to sleep in my pink dress.

Around midnight I felt the entire room illuminated with a white and gold light. It was stunningly beautiful and almost blinding. A soft voice uttered: "Child what would you like for your birthday?" I connected the light with God as I was very spiritually inclined from around age 2. Without even thinking, I said: 'A heart full of love that will forever be!'"

From then to now my heart is so full of love that there are times I don't even know what to do with the overflow. But I believe that it was the perfect gift for a perfect walk into my world ministry calling. What the world needs most of all is ... Love.

I lead a global mission called Joy-at-Work that stands on the pillars of Love, Respect and Support. I could have stopped at Love ... for if we love each other, respect and support will follow.
